Introduction

Study a creature's abilities and limitations before using it. Incomplete creatures possess special limitations and advantages which complete creatures lack.

The worlds of Basic Roleplaying are rife with supernatural and alien beings. Players can interact with exotic animals, fairy folk, extraterrestrial horrors, and other-planar entities, as well as mundane creatures such as lions and horses. This chapter provides some 90 creatures, both noble and bestial, for the gamemaster to utilize.

Incomplete Creatures

An entity lacking one or more of the characteristics of STR, CON, SIZ, INT, POW, or DEX, or which possesses one such characteristic in a limited fashion, is said to be an 'incomplete creature.' By definition, the otherworld planes of existence are inhabited solely by incomplete beings. An elemental which must summon its body into existence and has no permanent STR or SIZ is incomplete. An undead monster with no POW is also incomplete.

Only fully sentient physical beings are defined as 'complete.' Animals are incomplete because they lack free will, possessing instead fixed INT, described below.

Gamemasters should not usually permit the roleplaying of incomplete creatures.

Fixed INT versus Normal INT

Intelligent, sentient beings are said to possess normal INT. Animals and other unintelligent creatures possess fixed INT. Players of creatures with fixed INT do not normally make a die roll to determine their beings' INT.

For example, all dogs have an INT of 5 and all cows have an INT of 4. No die roll is involved. This does not mean that all dogs are equally intelligent, but it does mean that any dog (INT 5) is considered to be more intelligent than any cow (INT 4) and less intelligent than any baboon (INT 6). Ghouls, with an INT of 2D6, have normal INT. They are considered sentient. A dog might show more common sense than a ghoul with an INT of 4, or less, but the dog's common sense is
